

Not Just Words PSA (:60)

Ladies, have you ever felt...

Bloated for no good reason?

Pelvic pain or pressure?

Too full too fast, even if you're eating just a little bit?

Not so unusual, right?

But if you have any of these things, and they go on for two weeks or longer, see a doctor.

Because bloating, feeling too full too fast, and pelvic pain or pressure that doesn't go away can be signs of a gynecologic cancer...like cervical, ovarian, or uterine cancer.

And if your periods are heavier or longer than usual, or you have bleeding after menopause, see a doctor right away.

It may be nothing, but find out for sure.

Learn the symptoms. Listen to your body.

For more information about gynecologic cancers, call 1-800-CDC-INFO. That's 1-800-CDC-INFO.

A message from HHS and CDC's Inside Knowledge campaign.